HARVARD NOW HAILS MUNSTERBERG AS THE
'$10,000,000 PROFESSOR'

WHAT HARVARD COULD DO WITH MAJOR WIENER'S $10,000,000
Build ten new libraries like the Wiener Memorial.
Add 100 more professors to the staff at $5,000 each from the income of $10,000,000.
The average Harvard scholarship is $250. The income of the Wiener fund would provide 2-500 more scholarships.
The income would add a new group of freshmen dormitories
every year, as long as necessary.
Build a mammoth structure for sports indoors, including everything from football to tennis, a great lighthouse on the Charles, and a group of buildings, one as the home of each sport.
The income would finance archaeological expeditions, eight each year, at almost any part of the world.
Professor Hugo Munsterberg, called Harvard's $10,000,000 professor, was today the most untrodden man at Harvard, following the report that his resignation had been laid before the corporation as the result of outside criticism of his German views on the war.
"It is true," said Professor Munsterberg today, on his way to his laboratory, "I have resigned," and then he smiled.
At Harvard it was said today there is not one chance in ten million that the resignation will be accepted. It will be laid before the corporation next week by President Lowell.
Major Higginson of the Fellows will probably say "fubbiyah" and that will be the last of the Munsterberg incident.
ADmits RESIGNATION.
"I resigned last Tuesday after giving the matter careful thought," said the professor.
"I would not make any public statement now, but as the resignation is now known, I am willing to state that I did not care to stand in the way of the large legacy offered for Christian Science worship."
"I have nothing more to say about this. It is now in the hands of the corporation. They will act upon it."
"Do you think that Harvard University can be bought for $10,000,000?"
"No," he said.
The professor insisted, then thought for a moment without speaking.
"Oh, you must not look at it that way," he replied. "It is a crucial moment when ten millions are at stake. Every one will feel this way about it. I felt it my duty to do what I have done. Along in my course I have aimed at discussing thinking. Now of this I think alike.
There is no subject worth discussing about which there will be an unanimity of opinion.
"I have a right to my own opinion. I cannot allow them to stand in the way of Harvard getting a large legacy."
WIENER'S THEAT.
There can be no question of Professor Munsterberg's cash leaving $10,000,000 for Harvard. The $10,000,000 for Munsterberg out of Harvard.
The resignation was made out after and Harvard refused it.

A Romance With a Thrill

Marked gains by the allies in their campaign against the Germans are announced in the official statement issued at Paris this afternoon. It states that progress has been made between Arras and Albert, where the Germans have been delivering some of their sharpest attacks; that German trenches have been captured in the vicinity of Rheims, that progress has been made southeast of Verdun and that the offensive taken by the Germans on the allies' right wing has been definitely checked.

LESLIE MORNE closed the door softly behind her and with a sigh of relief walked swiftly toward the sea.
The night was dark, chill and moonlit. The esplanade lay broad, clean and silent in the quivering glare of the big electric lamps. The hotel windows showed a cosy glow, but there were very few people in sight.
It was near the end of the sea season and there was nothing to tempt the residents abroad. A fierce gust of wind caught the girl as she emerged on to the front, wringing her neat costume tightly round her slight figure and blowing the end of her velvet stole in long streamers behind her.
What a relief to be alone at last—free from the rudeness, the roughness, the endless fuss and bother of her three charges. Her nerves were on edge. Twice this day she had burst into weak, angry tears, to the immense amusement of the oldest boy.
A broad path of moonlight reflected the heaving and tossing of the waves against the Ledaia Mornes a golden streak leading right up to the moon. She had often been told that she was always crying for the moon, but her thoughts tonight were of strictly terrestrial things. The wind was coming across the sea.
She wondered whether it had been creating the clouds of Frenchwomen an hour before. It was a meager crowd, the others were French-women, Jovian, tragic, perhaps, but different from that which she knew.
The lights of a steamer were moving swiftly along the horizon. Perhaps it was one of those great liners bound

There were doubtless rich, handsome men aboard—men whose word was enough to raise you to dizzying heights and prize places with women, quaintly, mysteriously, in wonderful silks, abasms with gems.
There were like floating palaces, these aboard them—

SHE HEARS THE VOICE OF THE SEA CALLING.
The sea and the wind—they were calling to her and always calling to her. "Come out, come out, and wander with me round the world."
With unpleasant thoughts her thoughts turned to the three children clinging close to her peacefully in the belonging home. How could she leave her children—this, officially nurtured child, and the little girl, who she hated know up as heartless and common as they. No, she would not be free when her mother came down to relieve her.
Two men unknown to her and to each other were watching her with interest from the sheltered seats on either side. As she turned from the water by a patent leather circle, her white face fell upon her. It showed the anxious, weary look on her white face. It revealed her secret life, so vivid in contrast, and shone upon her dull red hair.
Her nerve control, brought in at last, was broken. She turned, and stared closely at a girlish figure who

In spite of the reports of gains for the allies on the main battle line, there is a feeling of apprehension in London owing to German activity near the Belgian coast.
Dispatches from London say that fear of a German of England was revived when it was officially admitted that Ostend had been evacuated.
The Ostend correspondent of the Central News Agency telegraphed that heavy firing had been heard near Dunkirk, France, indicating fighting between Germans and the allies in that vicinity. Dunkirk is on the straits of Dover, only thirty-five or forty miles from England.
REPORT BIG RUSSIAN VICTORY.
The Messagero of Rome publishes a dispatch from Petrograd stating that the Austrians and Germans were completely defeated by the Russians yesterday at Warsaw and lost heavily, thousands of prisoners being taken by the Russian troops.
A German official report, to the contrary, says that the Russian vanguard was repulsed near Warsaw with a loss of 8,000 prisoners and twenty-one guns, and that the German troops have cut communications between Warsaw, the capital of Russian Poland, and Ivangorod, the great Russian fortress on the Vistula River, sixty miles southeast of Warsaw.
The German general staff reports that the battle which began east of Wirballen (in the Suwalki district of Russian Poland), on October 4 and has been raging since that time, is progressing under conditions favorable to the Germans.
The Russians, it is also claimed, were defeated near Schir-windt, where they lost 8,000 prisoners, twenty-six guns and twelve machine guns. The Austro-German forces are now said to be preparing to cross the Vistula.
The great battle between the main armies of the Germans and the allies, which has been in progress for nearly five weeks on French soil, has been extended into Belgium.
Paris cables today announce that French, British and German infantry, with their artillery supports, that have been hidden behind screens of clashing cavalry on the Belgian border, north of Lille, are now engaged in an important combat on Belgian soil.
At the same time comes the report that the Belgian field

TEACHER AT CONSERVATORY SECRET BRIDE

Miss Jane McClure Forester, member of the faculty of the New England Conservatory of Music, and Clark G. Boynton, a Wollaston real estate man, were secretly married last June.

Mr. Boynton denied today that he was married and his bride declined to make any statement, but the Rev. D. E. Trout of the Universalist Church of Braintree, Vt., admitted that he tied the knot and Helen Talbot, secretary of the Ladies' Kennel Club of Massachusetts and sister of the bride, confirmed the marriage.

Since June 5, when the ceremony was performed, the couple have lived separately. Mrs. Boynton left at once and her husband at Wollaston. Both have taken every means to maintain secrecy.

In the meantime "Miss Forester" has continued her work of teaching at the conservatory and will remain there regardless of the outcome in the controversy arising from her marital affairs.

Miss Forester and Boynton had been friends for more than three years before, by auto and obtained a marriage license. From there they went to the home of the Rev. D. E. Trout, pastor of the Universalist Church, where they were married without attendants. Immediately after the ceremony they departed for Boston with his view not to allow their relatives or friends to know of the marriage up at least a year.

Mrs. Forester-Boynton was asked about the marriage. She declined to make any statement.

Mr. Boynton said, "There is positively nothing in it. There was a rumor to this effect some time ago, but it was without foundation. I, Clark Forester and I have been friends for a long time and continue as I have, but there is no marriage and will not be one."

The Rev. D. E. Trout said: "Mrs. Jane Forester and Mr. Boynton came to my house June 3 and were married by me. The young man said she resided in Staten Island and Boynton said that his home was in Wollaston, Mass."

Mrs. P. J. Talbot, sister of the young woman, displayed no hostility in speaking on the matter. She said, "My sister and Clark Boynton were married in Braintree, on June 3. That is the real fact and is uncontested."

BEAUTY THRICE WED, TWICE DIVORCED ON "CRUELTY" GROUNDS

Athlete Foster Says Bride Hid in Maine After a Brief Romance

MATRIMONIAL RECORD
OF FORMER COUNTESS

Married William Nicholson, Colorado millionaire, who saved her from mountain lion. Divorced him in four months. He divorced her for "intolerable severity."

Married Count de Chenevise in West Virginia in 1903. Given absolute divorce in Paris in 1911, with custody of son.

Married Hiram E. Foster of Tufts in Connecticut, February 6, 1914. Divorced by Foster on grounds of "intolerable severity."

Hiram Eliza Foster, Tufts graduate, is the third man whose romance with the beautiful former Countess de Chenevise has turned to ashes. Examination of the court records at Newport, Vt., today revealed he had been granted a divorce on the grounds of "intolerable severity," the second time this had been charged against the beauty—on September 24, the former Countess is now living in Paris. Foster was a college basketball player of fame. He was in the "valley" brokerage business in New York, and well known in Newport, R. I., and New Haven when he met and married the former Countess.

FATHER HAS MILLIONS.

Mrs. Foster is best remembered as Miss Daisy Kirk, beautiful daughter of Harford B. Kirk, who made a fortune of several millions as a distiller.

She married Foster February 6, 1914. Four months later, according to the husband's complaint, Mrs. Foster left him.

Accompanied by her eight-year-old son, by the Count de Chenevise, Mrs. Foster withdrew to a camp in the Maine woods, from which she did not emerge until early this fall. Then she returned to New York and sailed abroad.

Barbours her first husband, "so obtained a divorce on the grounds of 'intolerable severity.'" He proposed to her three times before he saved her from a mountain lion in Colorado and the fourth proposal was accepted.

Her next husband was Count Paul

Former Countess de Chenevise, divorced by Hiram E. Foster, Tufts and Harvard man. Married de Chenevise of an old French family, with an estate near Rouen. They were wedded at Wheeling, W. Va., July 4, 1903, and went to live in Paris. About two years ago the Countess divorced her husband. The divorce and Foster met at a dinner party in New York and were married after a brief courtship.

MRS. SULLY SEEKS FORTUNE IN CAKE SHOP

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Cotton and cake as a means to a fortune seem hardly in the same class, but Mrs. Daniel J. Sully, wife of the former cotton king who died in 1904, in a few months and lost it in a few minutes, has started a tea and cake shop to try to recoup some of her husband's losses.

Mrs. Sully admits her purpose in entering business is not for the fun of the thing, but to make enough to enable her and Mr. Sully, in the course of years, to retire with a fair income.

Mrs. Sully's strongest desire is to help in the re-establishment of the Sully fortune.

Her enterprise is called the Lady Baltimore Cake Shop, Inc., with Mrs. Sully as president and Mrs. C. C. Ruggles, the founder of the business, as treasurer. Mrs. Ruggles started business with one cake seven years ago and it has grown until Mrs. Sully saw its possibilities and decided to extend it.

For two or three years Daniel J. Sully has been running a small summer hotel at Watch Hill.

Mrs. Sully talked about her reasons for going into business and of the "intolerable" financial situation.

"People have misunderstood Mr. Sully. They have said that he saved a lot of money out of the crash but that is not so. He gave up everything he had. We have been running our place at Watch Hill but this is not enough, as it is only open in the summer months."

"It was hard for me to convince my husband that it was the thing to do, but I am going at this seriously and that my saying what I have will help him to understand the necessity. They will hear of him again some day."

New Harvard Songs

By MORTON BIRGE.

(Harvard College announces this rule for the new football song writers: "There should be an absence of the pugnacious spirit which characterizes some football songs. The composers of songs are requested not to use the name of any other college.—NEWS ITEM.)

The Harvard bards, who write the songs to cheer the team at football games, are now forbidden to come right out and mention the opponents' names. But, so the meaning may not miss, how would it do to sing like this:

"The Crimson blows like a raging gale. It blows right through any team from"

Or this:

"You may wish and wish and wish again, But wishing won't win for"

Even this:

"Rah, rah, rah! as our men slam through the foe, Rah, rah, rah! as we always told you so, Rah, rah, rah! as we knock the runners down. We're too polite to mention names, but you're done"

The Faculty can never say that songs like these are rude or bold. Opponents' names are never told. But, though the cheer may lack a name, The meaning gets there just the same.

Filene's Why fuss with dressmakers, when women may choose here from Filene's

2000 dresses with style, fit, finish and everything else equal to made-to-order dresses and save money in the bargain

There are seven or eight dress shops in this store of specialization. But we are talking now about the two shops on our Sixth floor that supply women's dresses at $10 and upward as high as $600.

The dresses sold in these shops are not the kind made by the thousand. Many of the styles originate with us—all differ in some respect from the dresses on general sale. Some are reproduced direct from imported models. Many of the finer dresses are made in our own workrooms on the premises.

The first dress made in each Filene style is tried on a living model just as a dressmaker-made dress is tried on. The lines, the draping, the general effect are all studied closely and many changes made before the style is approved. Then the perfected form is reproduced in clean, bright work-rooms by people who are well paid to do careful, honest work.

We adapt dress styles to types exactly as skilled dressmakers do, but we do it in advance. Each of our many models was chosen for its fitness to a specific type of figure whose requirements are well known to our experts.

Street dresses are here at $10 upward with remarkable values at $15. Gowns are here at $15 upward with an especially large group at $29.50. Between $10 and $600 are many varieties of the following:

BLAMES GUM CHEER IN BIG BOOK FRAUD

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—It was "a man who chewed gum" who interested Mrs. Emma V. Bird of Salt Lake City in the purchase of rare books. As a result of this endeavor, James J. Farmer, Colonel William J. Hartley and eight other officers and agents of the Anglo-American Antiquarian Association were brought to trial in United States District Court on charges of using the mails to defraud.

In opening the case, Assistant District Attorney Brown said the government would prove that the fraud had amounted to $120,000 in the last five years. The trial, which has been started before Judge Foster then Hon. Nathan and J. M. Hart entered plea of guilty.

Mrs. Bird was called to review the story she told. November, 1912, when she recovered against Farmer and his associates a verdict for $12,375.66, she had asked for that sum in editions of George White, Whitman, Paul de Kock, Carlyle and Flaubert that experts had valued at more than $10,000.

Farmer and the others were then indicted on charges of using the mails to defraud.

"A man who chewed gum," Mrs. Bird testified, "persuaded me to buy a set of Colonel Roosevelt's works, autographed, for $200. He assured me the books were worth at least $1,000. Some time later he told me of a wonder of a library that had belonged to a man in New Haven. It was worth $15,000, he said, but the man's heir needed the money and would let me have it for $5,000."

"Then, ex-Governor Wells of Utah introduced (then) Farmer to me and on his urging I bought the books. He called again and told me I ought to buy a library he knew about in Denver. He said it was worth $10,000, but that he could get it for me for $1,000. So I borrowed the money and bought it. I haven't seen Farmer since."

Glen Farmer is a son of James J. Farmer. He was convicted in Boston several months ago on the complaint of one of his "clients."

How he came from Newark, N. VILLAREAL IS NOMINATED AS MEXICAN HEAD

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Despatches from Mexico indicate General Carranza's resignation as first chief of the Constitutionalists in charge of the executive power in Mexico City, was presented to the convention of Aguascalientes and was accepted.

General Antonio J. Villarreal, Carranza's appointee as governor of the state of Nuevo Leon, was nominated for Provisional President.

Advices indicate that General Villarreal probably will be the convention's choice for Provisional President. He is one of the two Villa candidates, it is understood to be satisfactory to the Carranza generals and recently was sent on a mission by Carranza to negotiate with Zapata, who is represented as having taken a fancy to Villarreal.

Villarreal in 1912 started a revolution against the elder Diaz and was compelled to leave Mexico. He came to the United States and then tried to have him extradited, but failed. In 1910 Villarreal joined the Madero revolution. Madero appointed him consul at Barcelona after the revolution. He was in Barcelona when Madero was killed.

He returned to Mexico in 1913 to take part in the Carranza revolution and captured Ciudad Victoria and Monterrey from the Huerta forces.

A telegram from Governor Hunt of Arizona announcing that no movement of the state militia to the Mexican border had been authorized and expressing the governor's desire to cooperate in avoiding further complications of the situation on the border, was received with much relief by President Wilson and Secretary Garrison.

Enemies

Dioxogen inspires confidence, because it is a safe, efficient weapon with which to fight disease germs, the most insidious of all enemies of health and life.

Used on cuts and wounds; as a mouth wash or gargle; after shaving—it does its perfect work.

Dioxogen

is the one pure "peroxide of hydrogen."

Its appeal has been based on its purity and keeping qualities. It has always been economical—today, it is cheap because its price remains the same at a time when the "ordinary acetonidil peroxides" must be sold at soaring prices.

The Tragic Life Story of Mildred Sullivan, "Prettiest Girl" of Aroostook County

CHAPTER TWO

Mildred Sullivan, victim of one of the most baffling disappearance mysteries that New England has ever known, was born at the little settlement known as "Letter B" on Hammond plantation, six miles from Aroostook.

She was the second oldest of six children, two boys and four girls. Her father, George Sullivan, is a potato grower, as was his father before him. Nearly every man in that region is engaged in the potato industry or derives a livelihood from some branch of it.

The Sullivan home is in the heart of Aroostook County, one of the most celebrated potato centres in the world. Maine is said to be the second largest potato-producing State in the country, which fringes the New Brunswick boundary at the northernmost tip of the State, furnishes the bulk of the crop every fall.

Up Aroostook County way farmers grow little else save potatoes, excepting hay. They feed potatoes far more profitable than miscellaneous garden truck, such as is abundant in the farms further south in Maine.

The rolling landscape is patched on hill and in the vale with potato rows, miles and miles of them, and when the blossoms come the hills and valleys are a purple tint that made the giant potato patches look like flower gardens.

And Mildred and the other children would slide on the end of the big fat wagons laden with filled barrels and drawn by heavy horses. These potato carts crept over the brown highways like great caterpillars every fall, bound for the receiving sheds near the railroad cars to carry the harvest to markets far away.

Money was always plentiful when the potatoes came and everybody seemed happier. Prosperity smiled on the county. Mildred was still a little girl when she noticed this. She had an alert intellect, she had always been an observing child. She loved the hills and downs and the awaying trees, and her eyes and cheeks reflected the beauty of the landscape and the health-giving properties of the dry and invigorating climate. Girl Becomes Strong and Pretty.

Mildred became strong and pretty. She was a typical country lass. She loved to go fishing with her brother Ralph, who in two years had become a champion was Helen Carpenter, her aunt, who is a year younger, and that fact puzzled the little folks of "Letter B" and was the subject for much jesting and of great amusement.

"Just think, Millie," Helen would say, "I'm your aunt, and you're a year older than I am. Fact is just too queer for anything though? But you'll find me a good auntie."

And so wherever Millie went Helen went also. They were such fast friends that neighbors looked upon them as twins and inseparable. They picked berries together, went to the same school, attended the same ballroom parties and enjoyed the simple but wholesome diversions common to a rural section.

Millie's mother is still young enough in appearance to pass as her older sister. Her father is one of the family traits. Mrs. Sullivan's maiden name was Edith Carpenter. Her mother, Mrs. Corp Carpenter, had a gray hair in her head, although she recently for a family photograph which showed her in the centre of twenty-eight children and grandchildren.

And now whenever Millie's mother and grandmother glance up at that family group on the wall and study Mildred's features, they turn away with moist eyes.

"The child is not dead," the grandmother will say over and over again, "it can't be dead. I sit and think about it and it turns it over and over in my mind before I go to sleep and not once have I got the impression that my poor Millie is dead. We will hear from her soon and she will come home."

I find it in my nose, her mother does, too, poor soul, though she's so overcome that she is unable to leave her bed. If Millie were dead, why wouldn't the spirit medium say so? They had all agreed on one theory—that the child is alive and happy and will come back to us. Millie's mother has found comfort in this. She has consulted many mediums and they all read it the same. And it must be so."

Mystery Saddens the Household.

The mystery has saddened the Sullivan household. Ralph, a sturdy lad of nineteen, a member of the Maine militia, goes everywhere with his power to help his father locate Mildred or her body, because he and the father think her dead. No one but relatives, Mildred's mother and grandmother seem to be the only ones clinging to the idea that she will be restored to them as well and radiant as ever.

The doubt is one of the saddest elements in the tragedy. The boy Ralph is a member of Company L, Second Maine Regiment, and a member of the champion military band of the State. Millie was seventeen. Harry is fourteen, Donald twelve, Dorothy eight and Clayton five. Even Clayton is weighed down by the grief and strangeness of it all. He has looked up, open-eyed, at the officials and the reporters who have had to call so often, and he doesn't quite understand why mamma and granny keep crying and why mamma doesn't leave the room where the shades are always drawn now.

Neighbors drop in to comfort Millie's mother. The parents have the sympathy of the whole border country. The Sullivans moved from Hammond plantation several years ago. The grandmother still lives with an unmarried child at Letter B, but Mildred's father built a large white house next to a blacksmith shop on the outskirts of Bangor.

Bangor is a prosperous village of some inhabitants and is one of the prettiest of the towns of Maine. The homes are pretty and well kept. Property owners seem to try to rival their neighbors in the beauty of lawns and flower beds and the trees on estates and highways are among the first adornments to impress the visitor. Everybody appears rugged and prosperous. They point to the beautiful homes and garages of a man who came to the town penniless twenty years ago and today is a millionaire "potato king."

It was in such a community that Mildred Sullivan blossomed into maidenhood after leaving the pretty, but lonely, little settlement of Letter B, and it was there that she first felt the heavy hand of fate, through no fault or solicitation of her own.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

At the conclusion of the trial, Attorney J. F. McDonald told the court that Mrs. Porter is indebted to Miss Kennedy for three weeks' wages amounting to $24, and for $19.75, which the girl had spent for household effects.

Early in June Mrs. Porter reported to the police that some children's clothing was missing from her home and the maid was suspected. NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—Gustav Baumann, president of the Biltmore Hotel Company, twenty of the Biltmore Hotel, fell twenty stories, 200 feet, from the roof of the hotel yesterday to instant death. All mentioned in the belief that the death was wholly accidental.

Five hotel proprietors in New York were so well known, so successful and so universally respected as Mr. Baumann. He was a native of Switzerland and was born in St. Gall in 1855. He lived in New York until 1875, and was early in this a lace manufacturer. He spent six years in London, and in 1881 came to this country and located in Chicago. He became associated in the restaurant business with H. M. Kinley, then a noted caterer in Chicago. When Kinley, Emily G. Kinley, he later married. Noted Tenor Tells How He Lost His Voice in a Night

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—A pathetic story was told in Supreme Court of how Richard Jones, tenor of the "Old Homestead," and who made "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and "The Palm" famous, lost his voice in one night, his jet black hair turning at the same time to a silvery white. The singer's action to recover $25,000 from the Orpheum Company was being tried before Justice Lehman.

Mr. Jones at forty-two years looks like a man of sixty. His voice is said to have lost its silvery tones. At the close of his story there was scarcely a dry eye in the courtroom, and counsel for the Orpheum Company asked for a conference, after which it was announced the case had been settled.

When singing in the Alhambra Theatre in Brooklyn a weight fell on his head and caused a serious injury.

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR
A Kansas City Lady Darkened Her Gray Hair and Stimulated Its Growth by a Simple Home Process.
She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known resident of Kansas City, Mo., who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken on their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft, glossy and grow with little expense, which they can mix at home. To half-pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Harlan Compound and 1 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is reduced sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look 10 to 20 years younger."

Soon to Marry, Ends His Life by Four-Story Leap

Max Kizman, thirty-one, who came from Russia about five months ago, jumped from the fire escape in the rear of the fourth story of the tenement house, No. 123 Brighton street, and died at the Massachusetts General Hospital a few hours later. According to the people with whom he lived, he had made a previous attempt upon his life last week when he started to jump from the fire escape at the same place. He was pulled back by Joseph H. Wilson, daughter of his mother, who was married this week. The cause of his act is given as depression over the physical condition, as he was severely injured in an elevator accident a short time ago.

Chapman came to America for the purpose, it is said, of being near the girl who was to be married. The girl is eighteen years of age and is of a native type of Russian beauty.

GREY BATTLE LINE PUSHED INTO BELGIUM; GERMANS GET HASTENED

army under King Albert has escaped the trap set for it at Ostend by the Germans, and is working in conjunction with the allies on their attacks on the armies of Generals Von Kluck and Von Bülow.

A cablegram from a town in France, the name of which was deleted by the censor, says: "Hard fighting is now going on in the district about (deleted by censor). The allies are gaining ground and the Germans appear to be giving way."

TRYING TO SEIZE COASTLINE.

The allied army that occupied Ypres is meeting vigorous counter attacks from the Germans occupying a line stretching through Courtrai.

The French and their English allies are fighting hard to hold back the Kaiser's forces that are trying to seize the Belgian and French coast line.

German troops from the armies of General Von Boehn and General Hans Von Beseler are understood to be trying to clear the way for an advance toward Dunkirk and Calais. It has been known for some days that some of the chief objects of the German campaign is to establish the northern end of the Teutonic line upon the coast of the English Channel or the Straits of Dover.

In the meantime the Germans are keeping up fierce attacks against the allies in the vicinity of Lassigny and Roye to prevent the French and English from sending reinforcements to General D'Audart.

The present week bids fair to see important developments on the great battle line. The allies are faced with this dangerous prospect:

If the invaders are able to push back the allies in the extreme north and establish themselves in Calais or at some other point on the channel that cannot be strongly fortified, the French and British will be reduced to the necessity of confining themselves wholly to frontal attacks, as it will then be impossible for them to try any flanking except on their extreme right, near the Meuse.

German troops occupied the Belgian city of Bruges on Wednesday, according to advices received at The Hague today.

KAISER'S HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE.

Berlin official reports deny the claims of allied successes along the main battle line, and announce that the Emperor's headquarters have been moved farther into France. This is the first official statement that the Kaiser was actually on French soil, recent reports conflicting as to his whereabouts. He was recently reported at Thion, on the eastern battle front.

The London Times Copenhagen correspondent reports that owing to the failure of the Russian troops to advance, German troops are being re-transferred from the eastern to the western theatre of war.

The Russian War Office announces that the great battle of the Vistula, now in its eighth day, is progressing favorably to the czar's troops, though stating that no decisive result has yet been achieved.

According to the Scotsman, an Edinburgh newspaper, a German submarine was sunk by British patrol ships off the coast of Holland on Saturday.

Reports have been received in London that Turkey and Russia have come into naval conflict in the Black Sea, but these rumors are "taken with reserve."

An official dispatch from Cetinje says that Montenegrin troops have completely defeated 15,000 Austrians in the neighborhood of Sarajevo; that the Austrian losses were enormous, and that hundreds of men and many guns were captured.

"Italy will remain neutral in the European war unless by some unforeseen development her vital interests are threatened," Count DiCelle, the new Italian ambassador to the United States, declared today at Washington.

MAY ASK JAP TROOPS TO FIGHT GERMANS ON RUSSIAN BORDER

BY HERBERT TEMPLE.

London Correspondent of the American. ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 15.—"What the matter with Russia?" and "Will Japanese troops be brought from Asia to fight the Germans?" are two questions that are heard wherever military experts are gathered in London. No secret is made of the fact that the Russian army has thus far proved a disappointment.

If the German war machine smashes the Russian army, it may be regarded as very likely that Japanese troops will be taken through the straits of Korea and Japan and launched against the Kaiser's forces. Japan has announced that it will continue its attack on Germany in the Far East.

REPINGTON WARNS BRITISH OF INVASION

Remove Hairy Growth Without Pain or Bother

It is not necessary to use a painful process to remove hairy growths. With a little delicate handy you can keep the skin entirely free from these hairy growths. To remove hair, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water. Spread this on the hairy surface and in about 15 minutes rub off with the skin and the hairs are gone. To guard against regrowth, be careful to get rid of delatone.

Seven School Teams for Hockey League

Seven hockey teams will make up the Intercollegiate Hockey League this winter instead of four, as Medford High, Cambridge High and Latin and Newton High have signed the league agreement and are now all dyed in the wool league members.

It is a question whether the Triangular League, which has as members both Cambridge High and Latin and Newton, will continue, but it is likely that the two schools will still keep their association with Brookline High and have series games just the same.

Girls Put One Over on Boys in Basketball

Medford High has decided not to have a boys' basketball team this winter, although the sport will be continued for girls. Candidates for the girls' five have been holding out for practice and are rapidly rounding into shape.

HARVARD SQUAD TRIES
NEW PRACTICE SCHEME

By TED PARKER.

Harvard's extreme football fighting machine is having a taste of what is technically known as "arsene treatment" in training this week.

Some persons who claim to be in the confidence of the powers that be in the Stadium say it is only an experiment with the "rest cure."

There does not seem to be much question that those of the Harvard regulars who are able to get into the gym and engage in a rough and tumble fight with the team from scratch need a little rest, for in both of the last two games they had to bear the brunt of the attack and defense, for the new men on the team were after all only apprentices.

Nearly Everything in the Republican Platform Which Is Not Distinctly Vicious Is Weak and Vapid and Childish

The Manchester Union is the largest newspaper in New Hampshire. It is not a Democratic newspaper. It wants to support the Republican party. But this is what it said on October 9:

"The lesson to the Republican party in the Maine election is this: That so long as the Republican party makes it impossible for intelligent, self-respecting, patriotic Progressives to go back into the Republican party, just so long will the Progressive deflection defeat the Republican party and maintain the Democratic party in power."

"The strength of the Progressive party depends, and will depend, upon the attitude and the action of the Republican party. The more dully and obstinate reactionary the Republican party becomes, the more determined will become the Progressive vote in the United States."

These are almost the very words of Mr. Hearst's comment on the same Maine election made in this column several weeks ago.

How pitifully the Republicans of Massachusetts have failed to understand the political situation of the country is revealed in their recent State convention at Worcester. There they put forward Henry Cabot Lodge to sound the keynote and Calvin Coolidge, president of the State Senate, to present the platform and Samuel W. McCall to stand on it as the party candidate for Governor.

The progressive sentiment of the State has repudiated Lodge every time it has been an issue in this Commonwealth during the last ten years. The voters of Massachusetts have hunted him relentlessly in every quarter of the State, and wherever a candidate for public office has been proved to entertain Lodgeism, they overwhelmed him with political obloquy.

During recent campaigns they have kept him in the background. In this semi-darkness, the multitude of those who disapproved of him have been content to let him rest in peace. Now, however, they bear him forth into the spotlight, place him upon the tripod and cheer his oracular deliverance.

As if the Republican party were afraid that the people of Massachusetts might mistake their reactionary intentions, this Republican convention follows up the Lodge performance with the spectacle of Calvin Coolidge pronouncing the Republican platform principles! If any of our readers should ask any man who knows conditions at the State House who is the most reactionary member of our Legislature, he would respond instantly: "Calvin Coolidge, of course." If a novelist were to write a novel based upon Massachusetts politics and wanted to depict the arch type of a reactionary, he would draw the lines of Calvin Coolidge. Still anxious to fill the reactionary cup to overflowing, this remarkable Republican convention nominated for Governor a man who, as Mr. Charles S. Bird has truthfully declared, "never showed the least independence of party politics except in those rare moments of Republican lucidity under the leadership of Roosevelt when the Republican party attempted some progressive reform like the railroad regulation law, against which Mr. McCall voted, though he was only one of seven men in the whole National House of Representatives to do so."

Thereupon, the convention completed this sublime spectacle of staidism by adopting a platform which declares that private property is sacred, that the railroads must be allowed to recover from what they permitted Wall Street to steal from them, not by taking it away from Wall Street, but by taking it out of the pockets of the New England people, and that the people are not qualified to pass upon important laws by the Initiative and the Referendum.

Nearly everything in this ridiculous platform which is not distinctly vicious is weak and vapid and childish. It is a conglomeration of hackneyed platitudes and obvious straddles.

Leave Decent Men---Genius Especially---Out of War Hatred

Wagner, Verdi, Gounod, Have Nothing to Do with War's Brutality

Copyright, 1914, by the War Committee

Saint-Saens, the French composer, says that it is impossible now for any Frenchman to hear Wagner's music, just as it would be wrong to applaud a marvellous singer "who had injured one's mother."

There is similar foolish talk in other countries.

The Germans say they do not want to listen to the French composers, because France is fighting Germany, or to the Italian composers, because Italy is NOT fighting France.

The French denounce the German musicians---Why?

Why should decent men, men of real genius, be dragged into the war and its hatreds?

Whose mother did Wagner ever injure?

What has a great musician to do with the brutality of war.

When you see two bulldogs fighting in the gutter, you form your opinion of bulldogs. You do not feel hatred for the peaceable cow nearby, minding her own business and eating grass, even if she belongs to a family that owns one of the bulldogs.

You do not feel hatred for the beautiful cloud floating above because it happens to shelter the fighting dogs.

Human intelligence should not extend hatred of the war to any but those RESPONSIBLE for the war.

May the fighters and their inspiration come to a realization of their stupidity, and may those responsible get the punishment that they deserve.

The world in general will go on recognizing genius and applauding, whether it be French, German, Italian, English or Russian.

And only fools will hold the lofty INTELLIGENCE of a nation responsible for the vile brutality brought about by the national dogs---even if the dogs happen to be in command.

Motherhood Most Utterly Selfish Passion on Earth

When It Comes to a Question Between Other People and Her Children, the Average Mother Never Even Considers the Rights of the Party of the Other Part

By DOROTHY DIX

IN one of his subtly humorous plays, Barrie depicts a lovely and devoted mother, who calmly murders a man because he won't shut down a window through which the cold air blows on her little girl. The little girl has a sniffing cold in her head and when a fellow passenger in a railway carriage refuses to deprive himself a little fresh air on this account, the infuriated mother pushes him out of the door, where he falls upon the tracks and is killed.

And the mother can never be made to understand that she has done anything in the least wrong. In her opinion she has performed a virtuous and meritorious act in murdering anybody that interfered in the slightest degree with her child's pleasure or comfort. And we all know hundreds of just such mothers as the mother in the play. They may not actually take your life to make a Roman holiday for their offspring, but they slay your peace and comfort, and destroy your property to amuse their brats, without a single pang of compunction, ay, more!

They feel that you ought to consider yourself honored and blessed in being offered up as a living sacrifice to their little Tommies and Sissies and Margies.

Talk about the uselessness of mothers! Motherhood is the most utterly selfish passion on earth. When it comes to a question between other people and her children, the average mother never even considers the rights, privileges or desires of the party of the other part.

She Isn't Even Sorry

She's just bent and determined that her child shall have the best of everything, and the most of everything, and that it shall do as it pleases, and if this robs you or disturbs you or makes you miserable, so much the worse for you. She isn't even sorry for you.

She considers that it merely shows what a mean, selfish brute you are, not to be willing to hand over everything on a silver salver to her precious little tididums. There is something in motherhood that changes the gentlest, the most generous, the most just and delicately considerate woman into a ferocious monster of selfishness, who tramples roughshod over every one who comes near her in order to gratify the slightest whims of her children. These may seem harsh words, but I ask you to consider the conduct of the mothers of your acquaintance, and deny it if you can.

Consider as Exhibit A, if you please, the behavior of mothers on the street cars when accompanied by their offspring. Do they not invariably put little Johnny up so he can kneel on the seat, with his muddy shoes in the exact position to wipe off their filth on the clothes of every passerby? Do they not also take the psychological time and place, where little Johnnie can do the most harm to the most people and the most rampant, to feed him on soft banana?

Consider Exhibit B: The wanton destruction of your property by children under the very eyes of their mother. A mother will bring her child to see you, and watch him draw pictures with a
